Purvis Middle School students enjoy trip to Washington, D.C.

As Spring Break welcomed time off from school and relaxation for most students, three Purvis Middle School students went on a much different type of vacation. Mary Gail DuBose, Caroline Bell, and Tate Smith represented Purvis Middle School at the Junior National Young Leaders Conference in Washington, D.C., on March 13-18, 2011. These outstanding students were nominated by their teachers to attend this prestigious conference to further improve their leadership abilities, not only in school, but in life. Mary Gail, Caroline, and Tate had the wonderful opportunity of visiting numerous memorial and historical sites as part of the conference, as well as hearing from a very elite group of speakers. These students gained a once in a lifetime experience in an atmosphere filled with some of our nation's top leaders.

Mary Gail DuBose, Caroline Bell, and Tate Smith traveled to Washington, D.C. for a recent leadership conference.
